It is with pleasure that we announce the engagement of "A Royal Slave" at Bell's Opera House September 6. For it is not often that we have the pleasure of seeing many of the theatrical attractions of the first rank. "A Royal Slave," as it is presented by Gordon & Bennett's great company and its magnificent scenic investiture has been one of the most striking successes that the American stage has known in many years.

A golden opportunity presents itself to the Homeowner in the sale of Minnesota State lands, which will take place during October and November this year. Approximately 260,000 will be sold under the state laws of Minnesota and the terms on which this land is sold are such as to permit a man of small means to secure for himself a home of his own. The lands will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder. But 15 per cent of the purchase price needs to be paid at the time of sale. The balance may run for forty years at 4 per cent annual interest if desired. Bear in mind that the settler is dealing with the State of Minnesota and that the title to all State land is perfect, makes this an uncommon offer. The lands owned by the state of Minnesota are distributed particularly in the Northern part of the State, some in rich wheat fields of the Western portion of the state, and in the main, will grow anything that is indigenous to the soil, and this section is admittedly the most perfect dairy country in the United States. Honorable S. G. Iverson, the State Auditor and Land Commissioner has charge of these sales and the locations of the lands, as well as specific terms of sale will be gladly furnished by him.

While a "Royal Slave" is a play that appeals at once to the intelligence and the heart of an auditor, his eye has not been forgotten. The scenes are all painted from photographs taken in and near the city of Mexico, especially for this production. Among the most striking scenes is a view of the valley of Mexico as seen from the gardens of the Hacienda de Oro, near Chapultepec. It shows a distant view of the city of Mexico, the lake of the "Floating Gardens," and in the far distance, "through misty miles of purple leagues," the giant volcano of Popocatepetl; the whole picture framed in groves of palms and bowers of bloom and seen through the spray of a real fountain playing on the stage. Of special interest, also, are the scenes showing the Church of Pecos; the two scenes in the Sierra Madre Mountains, the Paso del Rey (Pass of the King) and the cave of the bandits in the heart of the mountains; the splendid moonlit scene of the tropical coast of the Island of El Toro (the bull) and the interior of the gorgeous Palace de Alvarez in the last act, which is a gem of art. These, with the splendid costumes and effects, make one of the most complete scenic productions ever seen here, and certainly the most beautiful in this country. Bell's Opera House September 6.

Mrs. F. R. Taylor and Mrs. Wm. C. Cowman and Miss Mary Cowman are in Cincinnati this week.

Mrs. R. Fred Haggerty and Mrs. James Gallagher, of Peebles, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Haggerty.

George Muntz, of Zanesville, arrived here Saturday and joined his wife and children, who have been visiting relatives for several weeks.

Earl Gruver has accepted a position as Mechanical Draftsman in the electrical department with the Westinghouse people of Pittsburg, Pa.

Wednesday morning was the total eclipse of the sun. It was hardly noticeable here as only a part of the sun was hidden from view. In Spain, Labrador and other foreign countries the sun was hidden entirely. The eclipse was to be noticed from half past three on until morning in this country.

No period in the romantic history of Mexico is more interesting than the short and brilliant reign and meteoric fall of the Emperor Maximilian. It is during this period that the story of "A Royal Slave" is laid.

The leading characters are of the proud old Castilian stock of the aristocratic families of Mexico, and the "Royal Slave" himself, El Aguilá, the Eagle, is the last descendant of the Montezumas, the ancient Aztec Kings, but himself a peon or slave of the family De Oro. His is a splendid life picture of a race now scarcely more than a memory, and is a strange combination of kingly majesty, gentle tenderness and a lion-like fierceness, a splendid barbarian. The company is a splendid one throughout, and the atmosphere and locale are finely carried out by the beautiful scenery and elaborate costumes. It is a play that an auditor will long remember with pleasure when the cheap, trashy, catch-penny productions are forgotten. Bell's Opera House September 6.

FOURTH REUNION

Of the Vance Family Last Thursday A Complete Success.

The fourth annual Vance reunion was held in the usual place, the grove on the farm of Griffith L. Vance on Thursday of last week. The weather was bright, though warm, and before noon numbers of buggies and carriages were seen turning in at the gate, their occupants ready to enjoy the day to the fullest extent. The Hillsboro band furnished the music for the occasion, and were somewhat delayed by the breaking of an axle on the way out, but they did not notice a little thing like that and secured a hay wagon, which they boarded and were soon on the scene in the best of spirits and ready to furnish their share of the entertainment.

After several excellent numbers by the band and much hand shaking among the Vances and their neighbors and friends, came the dinner which was one of the perfect successes of the day.

Mac Roush made a beautiful prayer, followed by the address of welcome by Miss Nora Sanders, which was given in a very creditable manner. The young lady's articulation was perfect, every word being heard by all present.

Tom Vance, of Gas City, Ind., made a very happy talk, speaking of old times and pleasant memories. Mrs. Hugh Vance, of Hillsboro, gave a reading and then came the speech of the day, delivered by Hy. D. Davis, of Cleveland. He made many touching allusions to the friends of his childhood, many of whom have passed into the great beyond. His talk was full of good things from beginning to end and heartily enjoyed and appreciated by all present.

This was the last number on the program, but the evening was devoted to conversation between friends, relatives and neighbors, and "all went merry as a marriage bell," and to all present the fourth Vance reunion was added to the pleasant memories of a lifetime.

LINGUISTS WANTED.

LARGE FIELD FOR SPEAKERS OF FOREIGN TONGUES.

Growing Trade Opens Up Opportunities for Young Men and Women Who Prove Capable.

The use of the foreign languages for commercial purposes is a matter of great and increasing importance, as the growth of foreign trade from the United States promises a large, new field for them. The services of a young man or woman commanding one or more of these languages are of distinct value in an exporting house. The young man may soon become a well paid foreign correspondent, while the young man soon rises to the management of the foreign department, and perhaps he sent to foreign countries as a trusted salesman or agent. Neither is this latter field closed to women, for there is one now traveling in Mexico for a western house, who sells more inks and adhesives than for any of the men they have on the road, and she began with only a limited knowledge of Spanish.

In the present state of foreign trade from the west, Spanish is the leading language, coming as it does with the trade from Cuba, Porto Rico and the West Indies and Philippines, the South American countries, and Mexico, and also from Spain. After the Spanish-American war there was a sharp interest in commercial Spanish, and this has resulted in the establishment of classes for instruction in that language for business purposes, both under private auspices and in the public schools.

The almost universal knowledge of French makes it the next available tongue for business correspondence. Just as French so frequently is the language of diplomacy, so it lends itself to the transaction of international business.

Closely ranking these languages in their order come German, Italian and Portuguese; and after these, as the leading foreign languages in business correspondence, come the Russian, Swedish and Norwegian, Dutch and Danish, Finnish, Polish, Bohemian, Hungarian, modern Greek, etc. Japanese and Chinese occasionally claim attention in one way or another, and once there was handed to me a letter in Cingalese. This had to be given up as untranslatable, and was respectfully referred to the British consul, but in every other case, I have always been able to find some one to take care of business matters in languages that I do not know personally.

In general the knowledge of a language for commercial uses is much short of the necessities of that language in a literary sense. The merely literary translator finds difficulty at first in the commercial use of the languages on account of the trade expressions and technical terms peculiar to each line of business. Yet in the letters from the foreign correspondent there are invitations to something more in correspondence than the average American letter writer is disposed to see. Almost invariably the foreigner of intelligence, in writing a business letter, puts into it a good deal more of formality and of politeness than the American can, at the same time putting more care into the penmanship and general appearance of the missive, many of their neatness and beauty of their execution.

In the ordinary matter for the average correspondence, the translator has opportunity beyond the mere stenographer to make a letter all that it should be. If a businessman indite a letter in a short, brusque manner, the translator, who realizes that it will go to a person where the formalities of life count for a good deal, has the opportunity to soften the dictation and round out the sentences where, in dictated correspondence in English, the writer would insist upon his exact wording. In this matter the translator of foreign languages requires a good deal more in equipment than does the shorthand letter writer.

Few people appreciate the necessity for the use of the languages in dozens of lines in the large cities and the surrounding country. I often wish that I could follow to their destination the letters that leave my hands daily. In every capital city of the world I should see the names of leading firms as familiar as are any in my own city, and in every country I should find people using American machinery of every description and other American products in endless variety.

This shows what an extent our foreign trade has grown, but manifestly none of these goods from our western factory gets into the antipodes by more force of gravitation. Not even the direction accredited to the course of empire accounts for the fact. Business methods in business languages are the outcriers of this foreign trade, and the necessity for linguists in handling it, comes of the fact that foreigners generally insist upon writing letters in their own tongue and upon receiving replies that require no interpreter. The frequently live in small provincial towns or out of the way places, far removed from anyone speaking the English tongue, so that translation is impossible, and letters in English are often returned to the senders with the notice that in order to do business with these correspondents letters must be in their own language.

"ONCE THERE WAS."

Once there was a banquet held in a Missouri town and the local orator responded to the toast, "The Ladies."

In unbroken eloquence he told how the roses, the lilies, the peaches, the cherries and the stars had been robbed of their beauties to endow the women of Missouri. A Kansan quipped with envy, and when the orator sat down he arose and drauded out, "The women of Kansas, gentlemen, are all that and then some."

When a man believes in a thing for all he is worth, he can't be beat. His chances of success fly out of the window when doubts come in at the door.

The governing principles of a store must be known to be right and be believed in by all its employees.

Goods that are unworthy and prices that are too high will never inspire them with any enthusiasm for selling or working.
